STRATEGY

Objective is runs tonight, so the card is built on who is actually hot in Fall 2026 rather than on career lines: Owen Vahey hits 4th because he's 12-for-15 with a homer or double in all four games, and the biggest move is Brayden Owens jumping from 9th/10th in the last two recorded orders up to 5th on the strength of 5-for-7 with 3 HR over those same two games. The counterweight is Dustin Klimek, dropped to 7th against his 1.846 career OPS because he has one extra-base hit all Fall (.083 iso). Josh Allison and Hector Valentin set the table on pure on-base — between them one home run in 99 career PA — while Trevor Millen sits 6th to honor the middle-of-order instruction and Stephen Perry bats 10th per his.
